Professor Diana Strazdes, The Predicament of the Living Presence

Among American artists active in the earlier nineteenth century, Rembrandt Peale understood most astutely the criteria with which popular audiences judged and responded to art. In 1824, he devised a portrait of George Washington that he hoped to sell to Congress as one of the paintings to be installed in the U.S. Capitol building. That painting not only exploited Peale’s knack for showmanship but placed him at the center of controversies over how the nation’s first President should be remembered. Relying on his stature as the last artist to have painted Washington from life, Peale entered into a type of portraiture that offered a living image of its subject, whose power, for political reasons, also demanded to be repressed.

Dr. Sylvester Ogechie, Art Collections, Museums, and Preservation of Cultural Heritage in Africa

April 21, 2012
1:00-3:00 pm
Mariposa Hall 1000
CSUS

In his lecture Art Collections, Museums, and Preservation of Cultural Heritage in Africa, Dr. Ogechie will investigate "the role of museums and art collectors in the preservation of cultural heritage in Africa using Nigeria as a case study. As the 21st Century unfolds, demands by various countries for repatriations of significant artworks and cultural objects have shaken up established ideas about the ownership and location of historical cultural objects. African countries involved in this debate argue for their right to ownership of African artworks looted from Africa during the colonial period, most of which are currently located in various Western museum and private collections. Western museums in turn argue that African countries are unable to provide appropriate care for these valuable artworks and therefore do not deserve to get them back. However, a growing number of African museums and private collectors are engaging in sophisticated practices of art and cultural heritage management that undermine this assumption." Dr. Ogechie will review "the state of art collecting and museum institutions in Nigeria in order to determine how these contribute to proper preservation of the country’s vast cultural heritage."

Jed and Martin Perl, A Conversation on Creativity, etc.

April 26, 2012
8:00 pm
UC Davis Conference Center

Martin Perl is a Nobel Prize winning physicist as well as a professor at the University of Michigan and later at the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center (SLAC). In 1995, Mr. Perl received the Nobel Prize in physics "for the discovery of the tau lepton." He shared the award "for pioneering experimental contributions to lepton physics" with Frederick Reines, who was cited "for the detection of the neutrino." (http://www.stanford.edu/dept/news/pr/95/951011Arc5066.html)

Jed Perl has been the art critic for The New Republic since 1994. His books include Eyewitness: Reports from an Art World in Crisis, Antoine’s Alphabet: Watteau and His World, and New Art City: Manhattan at Mid-Century; which in 2005 was an Atlantic Monthly Best Book of the Year and a New York Times Notable Book. Mr. Perl is currently a Visiting Professor of Liberal Studies at The New School in New York City. He has written for many publications, including Harper’s, The New York Times Book Review, Salmagundi, and The Yale Review, has lectured at museums and universities across the country, has spoken frequently on NPR, and has appeared on the "Charlie Rose" show. He is currently working on the first full-length biography of the American sculptor Alexander Calder, to be published by Knopf. (The New Republic, http://www.tnr.com/users/jed-perl)

This lecture is sponsored by the College of Letters and Science, Office of University Development, Department of Physics and the Art Studio Program at UC Davis.

Nelson Gallery, Dreams of the Darkest Night

March 29-May 27, 2012
Richard L. Nelson Gallery
UCD

Two Northern California photographers are featured in the Spring exhibition at the Nelson Gallery: Dreams of the Darkest Night, with work by Vanessa Marsh and Sean McFarland. Both artists hold MFAs from the California College of the Arts in San Francisco and both practice experimental forms of photography. Marsh makes photograms, which are images made on photo paper without the use of a lens. The earliest celebrated practitioner of the form was the emigre American surrealist, Man Ray, in the early 20th century. Marsh has reinvigorated the genre with large narrative images that have the illusion of depth, and employ grays as well as blacks and whites. McFarland's most recent body of work are large color images from nature that are very dark, almost all black, giving the viewer the feeling the he or she is glimpsing a dream in the depths of the darkest night.

Nelson Gallery, Bruce Guttin: Headwear Improvisations by a Sculptor

March 29-May 27, 2012
UCD

Bruce Guttin, a UC Davis MFA alumnus from the early 70s who lives in Davis, had an interest in headwear even when he was a sculptor working in wood in the 1970s. He now designs extremely simple, inexpensive and charming hats for his own use. The Nelson has commissioned Guttin to make a selection of these hats; also on view will be related drawings and a sculpture.
Domestic Disobedience: Redefining the Feminine Space

March 15, 2012 - April 19, 2012
San Diego Mesa College Art Gallery
San Diego

This multi-disciplinary exhibit, curated by Nuvia Crisol Guerra, brings together visual artists that forge a new space of Latina domestic defiance. Spanning several generations, these artists employ a diffuse arsenal to resist patriarchal imposed stereotypes and shape a contemporary female consciousness. Some of the participating artists are Juana Alicia, Claudia Alvarez, Ana Teresa Fernández, Amalia Mesa-Bains, Delilah Montoya.

Pence Gallery, Seeing Sound

March 9, 2012 - April 15, 2012
Pence Gallery
Davis

The Pence Gallery’s group exhibition will feature the work of Robin Hill and Sam Nichols (UCD Music professor). Seeing Sound delves into the realm of how visual artists incorporate ambient and instrumental sound into their work, exploring how what we hear is reflected in what we see. Artists Jiayi and Shih-Wen Young create installations in which sounds from various sources are transformed into visual patterns, in both paintings and digital projections. Rachel Clarke and Stephen Blumberg develop animated videos probing the nature of technology, using musical compositions to amplify and enhance thematic considerations. Dean Moniz, painter and sculptor, structures his compositions to correspond to specific passages of jazz and rock music. Robin Hill and Sam Nichols will construct an installation in an office cubicle of antiquated office equipment, punctuated by recorded and looped related sounds, in which visitors activate and compose their own compositions. Many pieces on display are distinctly interactive, requiring visitors to play, mix, and listen, ultimately offering a space in which the line between sound and art is blurred.

Artist Talks: Dean Moniz (Apr. 1, 1:30 PM); Jiayi and Shih-Wen Young (Apr. 1, 2:15 PM); Robin Hill and Sam Nichols (Apr. 13, 6-6:30 PM)

Jesse Drew, [Winter in America; 1974-1975]

March 9, 2012 - April 21, 2012
SF Camera work
1011 Market Street
San Francisco

Jesse Drew, on Winter in America: 1974-1975: “Gil Scott Heron’s song 'Winter in America' became a theme for me in 1974-75 and crystallized what America meant for many in the years when the euphoria of the 1960s lay crashed and burned, as the U.S. lost its supremacy in the world and the nation was wracked by unemployment, an oil and gas shortage, urban decay, and defeat in Vietnam. In the mid-1970s, I set out to see if there was still a utopian pulse to be found in America. The resulting photographs resonate eerily with our current time in many ways.”

Bryce Vinokurov

March 6, 2012 - April 7, 2012
Alex Bult Gallery
Sacramento

Bryce Vinokurov’s show features work from his Foodies in Exile series, which comes from his inspiration of the Northern California landscape and the emergent national fixation with the sustainable food industry. These largely abstract works depict foodies who are not set in a specific time or space—they are nomads with grills banished to a life of locavore eating. These satirical pieces include groups of individuals on bikes, around grills, donning chef hats or handling other accessories but with other comforts of the modern world unspecified. Vinokurov enjoys the idea of these foodies exiled to an idyllic place-cooking on grills, fighting over recipes and arguing over who is the best chef. His characters battle each other with pizza peals and chef’s knives, hold petty grudges over recipes and fight over truffle pigs. They wage war over food poisoning and have been exiled to a land that looks like Umbria, Tuscany or Napa. The inspiration for the landscape these foodies in exile often find themselves and the composition of these groups are heavily influenced by the painters Giotto, Piero della Francesca, and Lorenzetti. The show will include large oil paintings and small collages from this series.

OTHER EVENTS

Katharine Burnett
Art History

Pang Yuanji (1864-1949) is well known for the important catalogues of his ancient painting collection that he compiled between 1909 and 1925, especially the Xuzhai minghua lu. Less recognized is his patronage of over 20 artists who lived and worked in his home. Less known still are his undertakings in transforming China’s pubic sphere. Despite Pang’s passion for collecting the Six Orthodox Masters, his own paintings in the literati mode, and his memberships in seemingly conservative painting societies, his activities with political, social, and arts reformers indicate a modernist sensibility. By examining the Pang’s activities and network of associations, this lecture will attempt to provide a better understanding of Pang’s contributions toward modernizing China and its art.

Valerie George
MFA 2003

Valerie’s work is included in the Inside/Out Exhibition at the Morton Museum of Art curated by Time Wride.

The National Portrait Gallery and the Smithsonian Asian Pacific American Program have collaborated on an exhibition that is the Smithsonian's first major showcase of contemporary Asian American portraiture. Through the groundbreaking work of seven talented artists from across the country and around the world, the exhibition offers provocative renditions of the Asian American experience. Their portraits of encounter offer representations against and beyond the stereotypes that have long obscured the complexity of being Asian in America.

Hong Zhang will be showing five large hair drawings in the upcoming exhibition Portraiture Now, Asian in America: Portraits of Encounter at The Smithsonian National Portrait Gallery from August 12, 2011 to October 14, 2012. The exhibition runs for a year.

DEPARTMENT NEWS

Jayme Yahr (MA 2007)

Professor Diana Strazdes (Art History)

On March 24, 2012, Professor Diana Strazdes delivered a paper, “Communicating the Unseen in Washington Allston’s Paintings of the 1830s,” at the 33rd Nineteenth Century Studies Association Conference in Asheville, North Carolina. The topic of the conference was “Spiritual Matters/Matters of the Spirit.”

Daniel Glendening (BA 2005)

Daniel is pleased to announce two recent publications featuring his work. The first, Panhandler, published in physical and digital form by the University of West Florida, features a project I completed specifically for publication: An Attempted Partial Taxonomy of Rocks. The magazine can be viewed online at Panhandler Issue 6, where it is also available as a series of downloadable pdfs.

Youngsuk Suh (Art Studio)

Youngsuk Suh was a part of the special exhibition section of the Korean Art Show Fair in New York this past March. Six pieces from his new "Let Burn" series were a part of the main exhibition along with six other Korean artists.

Deborah Hamon (MFA 2002)

Deborah’s image, Pinnacle, was selected for inclusion in the 2011 Photo Review Competition issue. She has also been invited to participate in The Arctic Circle residency in the fall of 2013.
At the Association for Asian Studies Annual Conference held in Toronto in March, Katharine Burnett chaired and co-organized the panel, “So How Bad Was It? Comparative Decadence between the Jiajing and Wanli Eras,” sponsored by the Society for Ming Studies. For the Society for Ming Studies, she organized the roundtable discussion: “Perspectives on Decadence in the Jiajing and Wanli Eras,” and contributed a paper, “Decadence Disrupted: Arguing Against Decadence in Late Ming Art History.” While at the conference, she also served as a discussant for the panel, “Rhetorics of Eroticism in Chinese Art and Literature, Song to the Ming.”

In April, Professor Burnett will be a Study Leader on a Smithsonian Institution tour, lecturing while traveling to Beijing, Xian, Chongqing and the Yangzì River, and Shanghai. After the SI tour, she will present a lecture on her research on the Shanghai collector Pang Yuanji to the Royal Asiatic Society.
