Rules of Magic

Written by Keaton Wooden Transcribed/Orchestrated by Wes Smith

\[ & \]

Piano

\[ & \]

5

9

©2022
Some man lifts up his hands and you may wonder what it holds. Some treasure full of gold or fancy jewels. But, more important than the plunder is the wonder that it holds that fills you with more magic than you ever thought you knew. It fils you with more magic than you ever thought you knew. A spark inside your mind is lit by seeing the impossible. And now you'll find that nothing's writ and you'll do the impossible. And some day lying old in bed you'll think back to that word he said. Too

Rules of Magic
Rules of Magic

many syllables to count while scarves and rabbits all poured out. It dances in your mind like some kind of incantation. And tell us what the word was? Prestidigitation!

It's a small man-uev - but quickly proves, in the proper hands, it'll make you rich! A bait and switch, a bait and switch, a bait and switch, a bait and switch, casts a spell on me.

Rules of Magic
Rules of Magic

pall around subsistence that existence feels like a fading mist. No man can blame this world without a heart that's forged in steel. But lives of quiet desperation call us on. But tell me what the fear is when we learn that nothing's real. That knowledge gives us courage to face the Great Beyond. And courage that compels us into a great response. And tower of imagination fractures all reality. And shadow of this mortal coil is nothing but a fallacy. And from this simple trick we teach that greatness comes from mountains move. And go to man who doomed to dare, produce a hat and? ? ? Take the everyday then, on the script, a copper pipe a? ? pit and turn it into a? ? ? the bait and switch! The bait and switch!