The Woodland Review: October 2021 - November 2021 - UC Davis

The University of California Davis is pleased to invite applications of lawsuits before the International Court of Justice and their possible impact on the prevention of cultural property damage and destruction.

Professor Heghnar Watenpaugh just completed a project dedicated to making street art accessible to blind and visually impaired people. Her project, called "Street Art Access," was recently featured in Newsweek in which she discusses a pair of lawsuits before the International Court of Justice and their potential impact on the prevention of cultural property damage and destruction.

Professor Emeritus Manual Neri died this past October 18. Neri was an early faculty member of the UC Davis art program and was known for creating life-size figurative sculptures in plaster, bronze and marble. Neri's work is included in major museum collections around the globe.

ArtYard. Participating artists include alum Lisa Rybovich Cralle (M.F.A.’11) and Angela Willetts (M.F.A.’16). The exhibition features a variety of works, including paintings, sculptures, and installations. The show is curated by Isolde De Buck and will include Brouckaer’s most recent collage works on marble and a series of exhibitions exploring the concept of "interconnectedness." The show opens on October 23 and runs through November 20.

Professor Robin Hill, co-curates "Going to the Meadow" with Ulla Warchol. This is a residency-based exhibition where distinct collaborative groups enact weeklong collaborations while in residence at ArtYard. Participating artists include alum Lisa Rybovich Cralle (M.F.A.’11) and Angela Willetts (M.F.A.’16).
